FEBRUARY 7, 1902.

Oklahoma City has been assured the Katy road.

The republicans of our city are laboring gently but earnestly on some "lovely" plans for the city spring election—"huff sed."

Congress has provided for an increase in the salaries of the cabinet officers and the federal judges. This measure will, of course, benefit the general public.

Amid the talking of the appraisers, the sound of the hammer and the lumbering of the lumber wagon, the sound of the "trunkers" voice is lost in this city.

Said an owner of considerable property recently: "Show me a town in the Indian Territory that makes rapid strides forward within one year and a half after the lots are appraised and sold and I will show you the coming town of that vicinity. If the proper enterprise is there it will show its appreciation of release from bondage by eliminating all traces of its former struggles." Capital.

Quite a freak is on exhibition at Billy Keys saloon, corner of Second and C. It is the body of a calf with two distinct heads, two fore feet and four hind feet. Said calf was bred by Billy's father, near Wichita Falls, Texas, and lived four days. Mr. Keys says that it drank milk with either head, and seemed to be as hale and as hearty as any calf until an accident cut its career short. A dog on the place having never seen anything like it before—ran upon it and killed it. But Mr. Keys had the hide mounted and it looks very natural. It is certainly a freak of nature and well worth seeing.—Lawton Republican.

We have no desire to see the above freak, but we would take pleasure in taking a look at the dog.

Story of the Shoes.

Last night "The Star Boarder" troupe embarked on the north bound Southern Pacific train leaving San Francisco at 7 p. m., for Portland. Miss Mead occupied a berth on the "pullman" and as usual placed her shoes under the berth for the porter. On the train there was another pullman bound east. By some mistake the porter placed Miss Mead's shoes in the east bound car. In the morning Miss Mead searched for her shoes. But alas, there were no shoes, here was a fix indeed. The manager of the company cried for a shoemaker to meet the train on its arrival with a pair of shoes. The man was at the depot alright, but with a pair of dress As Miss Mead's size is No. 2 she became wroth and finally borrowed a pair of carpet slippers from a "Chicago" drummer until she could drive to the hotel and secure the necessary and proper fitting toddlers. What Miss Mead will do and say to that porter when she again lays eyes on him will be good and plenty.
